Visual Timer

Using Visual timer is very beneficial from the productivity point of view. It is hard to manage your time when you set no real boundaries and a good old timer can do just that. Only when you have a boundary on your time can you stick to the task you should be working on. When it comes to timer you should look for simple ones. You do not really need any extra features - all it has to be able to do is to count down. It just must inform you when the time is up. A timer can be also very helpful with reminding you not to work. Instead of sitting in front of your computer screen all day it is better to have a couple short breaks and get some move.
